A seating chart is passed around for the Circuits final. After being signed by every student, it is picked up by the TA. The TA notices faint penciling of all the True/False answers in the corner of the paper. After investigating, there are no leads on the person who wrote the answers on the seating chart, but one student comes forward confessing to copying them. Should any students be found guilty of an Honor System violation? If yes, what penalty should be assigned?
